

Harris County
Domestic Violence Coordinating Council
2022 Annual Report

As we look back at the past year, I have been reminded of all the amazing work that the Council has achieved. From growing the staff to increasing the provision of services to creating effective community collaboration, last year was another example of the dedication, power, and commitment of the women who work for HCDVCC. I have had the honor to serve as the Board President for the past two years, and as I enter my last year of service, I am confident that HCDVCC will not only continue to provide vital services to survivors of domestic violence, but will grow their ability to reach more survivors and take important steps to one day end the cycle of violence.

HCDVCC Board of Directors

The year 2022 has proven to be full of challenges and promise. For HCDVCC we know that 2023 will be even more busy with plans to launch a Mobile Traumatic Brain Injury Initiative for the county, revising the Partner Council for HCDVCC, launching of awareness activities that seek to address the high number of homicides, finding more solutions for the ever growing needs for housing and safety for survivors, and implementing strategies and innovations that assist those who are using violence in efforts to prevent future violence. HCDVCC thanks each and every person, organization, and system who works with and responds to those suffering the trauma. We cannot do this work in isolation and all of our collective efforts make a difference. I am reminded of the story of the star fish ...

The Starfish Story
Original Story by: Loren Easley

One day a person was walking along a beach when they notices a child picking something up and gently throwing it back into the ocean. The person asked the child, What are you doing? The child replied, throwing this starfish into the ocean so it won't die. The person responded to the child by saying don't you realize that there are hundreds of starfish along the beach today, you can't possibly get to them all before they die, you can't make a difference. The child politely bent down, picked up another starfish, tossed it into the ocean, and said...made a difference for that one!

In our work it can feel like there is no possible way to make a difference. When one looks at the numbers throughout this report – then combines this with numbers from all the DV organizations and systems that are serving the community – the numbers are overwhelming. AND...these are only people that are coming forward for services – national research tells us that less than 10-15% of people who are suffering the trauma of domestic violence will ever come forward. This makes it feel even more challenging – however – when I remember the starfish story, I am reminded that each and every person who receives help, support, restored hope, kindness – someone and something has made a difference for them – and they in turn make a difference for someone else. THANK YOU for never giving up and thank you for supporting HCDVCC.

Summary

Since the pandemic of COVID-19 began, domestic violence has continued to surge in Harris County with increasing felony assaults and domestic violence homicides, increased numbers of hotline calls to DV providers, backlogged criminal justice systems, and rising costs to all families across the county. Domestic Violence shelters are increasingly more unable to meet the demand for safe harbor and the need for housing assistance continues to grow while the available inventory has been unable to keep up with the demand. Frontline workers are exhausted and the need for self-care ever more important. Systems are overworked, understaffed, and under-resourced. These past few years have been full of challenges and tragedies, and they have also brought opportunity and hope for change and better things to come.

The need for a coordinated community response with community-wide systemic support remains a high priority for HCDVCC. And the need to create lasting systemic changes that will decrease DV homicides and increase safety across the county remains as one of the highest priorities. The pandemic continues to impact housing programs making it more difficult for clients to be ready to exit into nonsubsidized housing units at the end of their time in the programs. The rising costs of rental units, the requirement for proving income at three times the number of monthly rent costs, as well as the increased application and deposit costs have created insurmountable barriers for many women with children. Lastly, as the systems continue to be backlogged and slow to respond, the High-Risk Team model continues to be of extreme importance to providing those at the highest risk of homicide with access to services to increase safety. HCDVCC is proud and honored to receive over $260,000 from Kim Ogg and the Harris County District Attorney's Office to expand the high risk team and add additional staff to meet the demand.

- Award of $50,000 from United Way to support the collaborative building work of the agency.
- Securing Flexible Funding for those fleeing violence to increase safety. HCDVCC partnered with Harris County Commissioners to secure over $4 million of ARPA funding and create a process to fund 20 different organizations to spread these funds to those in need across the county.
- Advocating and securing the allocation of 25% of the County's emergency housing vouchers (funded by the federal ARPA funds) in collaboration with Houston Coalition for the Homeless, Harris County and the City of Houston. Additionally, HCDVCC received funding to provide supportive services for these families and has subcontracted with 3 different agencies to provide these services. This brings approximately 300 new housing options to domestic violence families with a long-term stay of up to 8 years.
- Transitioning the Ring for Safety Program from a local project to a National Project – this is the brainchild of our own Susan Hickey who started such a successful local project that the RING corporation has now partnered the National Network to End Domestic Violence to make this a national project.
- Expanding the reach of the High Risk Team by increasing the number of staff for the team.
- Launching the Expect Respect Prevention program in the education system to provide group and youth leadership activities in local schools.
- Shifting the essence of the work of our housing team to engage in interventions that target the trauma with a particular emphasis on nurturing strengths versus the traditional model that focused on referrals to resources. This emphasis is rooted in relationship building to support coaching and mentoring through the trauma to build skills for coping and calming the central nervous system, and Case Workers are now Trauma Support Partners to reflect the change in the service paradigm. HCDVCC envisions providing technical assistance and training to other providers to expand this approach across the service delivery area.
- Developing relationships and working with leaders from Pretrial Services, Harris County Community Supervision and Corrections Department, Harris County Courts Administration, Harris County Public Defender's Office, Harris County District Attorney's Office, Harris County Jail Re-Entry services, AVDA, and Julia Babcock from University of Houston to brainstorm creation of positive interventions that can be used to increase offender accountability and impact victim safety. This group of leaders is committed to working toward creating new and innovative offerings that will address offender domestic violence recidivism.
- Launching a research partnership with the University of Houston Psychology Department and Dr. Carla Sharp through the award of an NIH grant for researching how an intervention called Mediated Interventions for Sensitizing Care Givers (MISC) might become a promising practice for working with families impacted by domestic violence.
- Hosting and Coordinating the Deliberate Dialogue Speaker Series to increase community knowledge and awareness of the intersection and gaps of domestic violence and the criminal justice system.

The Work We Do

As a systems level provider, intermediary, and collaborative focused organization working in the space of domestic violence, HCDVCC seeks to increase access to services and safety for families fleeing domestic violence as one pillar of the work being facilitated. The Harris County region sees the largest demand for services, the largest number of calls to law enforcement, and the highest number of domestic violence homicides. Survivors in the region experience being turned away from emergency shelters at a rate of more than 70% due to lack of space. Emergency shelter interventions are typically a last resort and are underutilized by families experiencing domestic violence with mothers citing fear in bringing children into shelters as just one reason for not using a shelter intervention.

As shelter is limited and not always a pathway that a survivor will choose, the need to improve and increase access to other housing interventions has increased. HCDVCC is working to improve access to housing services for families fleeing domestic violence as an additional tool for increasing safety. At the end of 2022, HCDVCC has over $7 million in HUD funding for domestic violence rapid rehousing for over 310 families. HCDVCC contracts with 7 different domestic violence organizations to facilitate these grants, serving as a funder and intermediary for HUD funding for the region. HCDVCC also developed and facilitates the Domestic Violence Coordinated Access project to prioritize the most vulnerable and highest safety needs into the available housing units for the tri county area. This collaborative process for coordinated assessment and intake for domestic violence housing programs has 10 different organizations using a unified assessment tool to place families on the wait list for housing opportunities.

Families who encounter the criminal justice system as a result of a call to the police often do not interface with a formal domestic violence program for services. This is another pathway where an intentional focus on strategies to improve safety are being targeted by the work of HCDVCC. This is the second pillar of the work being facilitated: the improvement of systemic offender accountability so that victims can increase safety. HCDVCC facilitates the multi-disciplinary High Risk team in the county. The goal of the Harris County DVHRT is to create a coordinated community response focusing on high-risk domestic violence investigations in which victims need immediate response and attention by all service agencies and advocates in the community, and by which offenders need greater accountability and monitoring.

This project supports a process to identify, track, and prioritize into services the highest risk cases of domestic violence for strategic interventions for offender accountability and rehabilitation. Families in need of services are assisted by an HCDVCC team navigator, a mobile advocate, for safety planning and connection to community resources to meet basic needs and trauma recovery. This includes education and navigation to a DV provider home for ongoing support and services if the survivor chooses.

The need to address prevention of domestic violence and decrease the domestic violence homicides is the third pillar of the work HCDVCC is focused on. HCDVCC facilitates many work groups and committees to increase coordination and collaboration across systems and agencies in efforts to improve how our community is responding to the needs of survivors, how our community is provided with awareness and information, and how our systems and organizations are provided with training and technical assistance to implement best practice approaches for the delivery of quality services.

Expect Respect (Allstate Grant)

The Expect Respect Program is a school-based program designed to promote safe and healthy relationships. Harris County Domestic Violence Coordinating Council is a pilot project along with three other sites across the United States in collaboration with Allstate and SAFE (Stop Abuse for Everyone) in Austin, Texas.

The program has 3 primary components: 1) support groups for children grades 3-12 who are at risk for violence due to previous exposure and other traumas, 2) youth leadership development through education and creative arts, 3) strategies to engage schools, families, and communities to create safe and welcome spaces for youth.

Our goal with the implementation of the pilot project is to provide a foundation to equip youth to develop healthy relationships, which can prevent dating/domestic violence.

The Expect Respect groups have really taken off since November. Initially, there was a bit of concern on how to pull students and not affect their classes. However, thanks to the support and collaboration from the Community in Schools staff, we have found a way to make this work so that it is beneficial for students and teachers. With that we can be consistent with groups and the Youth are excited about participation. One of our greatest successes is buy-in from the school staff. When Expect Respect was first launched there was pushback, and that was due to the teachers and counselors not understanding what the group was about. Or even feeling this was something they may have to be accountable for when they already have so much on their plates. Now, there is a mutual consensus as school staff are seeing how helpful this can be for students; especially those that are truly at risk. Most of the staff now see the benefits of the group and how it is also a layer of support for them as teachers and counselors. We now move together from the perspective of a whole team and at the end of the day the collective goal is to help our students.

A total of forty-seven assessments have been conducted with middle and high school students and thirty-seven groups have been facilitated since the inception of the program in September of 2022.

High Risk Team Initiative

The Harris County Domestic Violence High Risk Team (DVHRT) is a homicide prevention model that was first organized in 2018 through a Texas Council on Family Violence (TCFV) grant awarded to the Harris County District Attorney's Office. In 2020, the project moved to HCDVCC for continued support and oversight. The DVHRT was formed to reduce lethal and near-lethal intimate partner violence assaults and to audit the entire domestic violence response system by identifying and closing gaps in service and protection. Cases that are most at risk for homicide are assessed by partner agencies with lethality assessment tools and referred to our team to provide safety and support to survivors, and accountability, monitoring and rehabilitation to those who use violence. Given that Harris County is the third largest county in the nation, a smaller DVHRT was formed in 2020 to gauge the effectiveness of creating smaller teams in specific areas of Harris County for possible expansion of the initiative. This smaller DVHRT is located in the Pasadena area. Its members consist of the Pasadena Police Department, the Harris County District Attorney's Office – Domestic Violence Division, domestic violence provider, The Bridge Over Troubled Waters, Harris County Pre-Trial Services, and HCDVCC.

The following statistics are the cases identified by both teams for January 1-December 31, 2022.

Total number of cases to Harris County DVHRT for 2022 – 145

Total number of cases for DVHRT-Pasadena – 152

The statistics are an example of the type of assistance that is provided by our mobile advocates to the high risk survivors who are identified by the Harris County team or from partners in the community.

DVHRT Success Stories...

“Sally’s” case was referred to DVHRT by the Domestic Violence Division at the District Attorney’s Office. She was granted a protective order against the harm doer due to many incidents of abuse. When assessed, “Sally” had scored a 32 on Dr. Jacqueline Campbell’s Danger Assessment risk assessment tool. An assessment with a score over 18 is seen as extreme danger. Given the score from this tool, concerns for her safety were high. While the harm doer was out on bond for a criminal charge against “Sally”, and with a protective order in place, he took their child and prevented her from seeing the child. “Sally” was confused about what she could and could not do and what the harm doer could and could not do. There were protective tools in place but there was little understanding of how these tools could be helpful. With the “Sally’s” consent, the case was reviewed with DVHRT partners. Discussions began from all partner agencies about ways to increase her safety while also ensuring that the tools that had already been granted by the courts were enforced. She was provided support and advocacy through this journey, and no action was taken without her knowledge and consent. To address her concerns, she was accompanied to the civil and criminal court hearings by an advocate. As the case continued and “Sally” resumed her steps towards her independence, she disclosed that the harm doer was beginning to stalk and harass her. A thorough and robust safety plan was developed with her. A RING camera for safety and documentation purposes was provided to her, and she was assisted with relocation to a confidential location. Unfortunately, a couple of months later, the harm doer tracked her down. This time, he threatened, not only “Sally”, but also additional friends and individuals nearby as well with a gun. Law enforcement was contacted and the DA’s office accepted more charges against the harm doer. The harm doer’s bond was revoked, and he was placed in the custody of the Harris County Jail. While in jail, his mother filed for custody/visitation rights on behalf of the harm doer and herself. “Sally” was assisted in obtaining legal representation from a DVHRT partner, and the civil custody/visitation case was eventually dismissed by a Judge. While the harm doer was in jail, “Sally” was relocated. She continues to be supported, validated and educated by her advocate, and the team, to ensure she continues to be safe. “Sally” expressed that she couldn’t have gone through these numerous issues and challenges without the support of her advocate and the DVHRT. She is thankful that she did not have to go through this alone.

“Anna’s” case was referred to the DVHRT after the Def had strangled and threatened to kill her with a machete. He did this while he was out on bond for drug related offenses. Because of this violent incident, the harm doer had additional charges filed on him. The Domestic Violence Division at the District Attorney’s Office triaged the case and conducted a lethality assessment through the use of Dr. Jacqueline Campbell’s Danger Assessment. “Anna” scored a 27, and landed in the extreme danger category. “Anna” had separated from the harm doer in an attempt to start a life free of abuse. However, after he was arrested for his crimes against her, his family started to harass her in person and over the phone demanding that she drop the charges. This is often a tactic used by family and friends to make a survivor feel guilty or blame them for what happened. It is also an attempt to convince a survivor that if charges were only dropped, everything would be better and the harm doer would leave a survivor alone. Being a citizen from another country, “Anna” was not knowledgeable about the laws in the US. She was nervous, scared and anxious about what to expect when trying to obtain any kind of legal help for safety. After being referred to the team for assistance, her mobile advocate and DVHRT partners worked to provide her the education and support she needed. This included an explanation of her rights as a victim of a crime and as an individual in the United States. She was eventually granted a 20yr protective order, was relocated to a confidential location, provided assistance with her U visa and immigration services, and provided financial assistance to get her car fixed. She stated that she felt validated and heard. She had someone to walk through this journey with her in a country where she did not have any friends or family members. She states she feels safer and stronger as she works on accomplishing the goals that she has set for herself to begin her new life.

Housing

Housing is a key intervention to facilitating safety for survivors in Harris County. The Harris County Domestic Violence Coordinating Council (HCDVCC) exists to create efforts that increase access to services and safety for victims of domestic violence and minimize the challenges in accessing those systems. One way to meet the mission is to build formal collaborations that effect systemic change through understanding and improving how the each of the systems work to enhance safety for victims of domestic violence. Streamlining the process for families fleeing from domestic violence to enter into safe, stable, and affordable housing options is most important. HCDVCC is working to create collaborative partnerships in the community and build their capacity to house survivors, thus increasing safety and creating positive change. When service providers can not take on new project, HCDVCC has tried to step in and relieve the gap in service in Harris county that has a tremendous need. Our housing projects create community wide best practices for rapid rehousing for victims of domestic violence, and unifies when, where, and how victims are served. It creates a process for streamlining services and decreases the frustrations victims experience when navigating complex systems.

Housing is a proven strategy to meet survivors needs. Approximately 30% of requests for shelter go unmet. Many victims often do not see shelter as a viable alternative and remain with their abusive partner. This rapid rehousing project bridges the gap for those fleeing domestic violence to enter into supportive, safe housing alternatives. Our projects target domestic violence victims who have no other residence for safe housing, and those who lack the resource and/or support networks, family, friends, faith-based, or other social networks to obtain and maintain permanent stable housing. This model operates as a housing first model, meaning the survivor decides if she is ready to be housed and the proposed outcomes include families securing safe, affordable housing, increasing family income, increasing family access to resources and mainstream benefits, and building capacity to remain in stable housing. Our projects doubled Harris County's housing stock inventory.

HCDVCC serves as the coordinated community response for rapid rehousing by either subcontracting with domestic violence organizations or by directly serving survivors by providing rental and utility assistance as well as supportive services. Supportive services include intensive trauma healing support, case management that focuses on increasing physical, emotional, and financial safety.

Rapid Rehousing Success Stories...

"Wanda" experienced many months of physical and mental abuse at the hands of her boyfriend, including strangulations. As a mother of three, she was struggling to cope and struggled to be mentally healthy and free of substance abuse. After making the difficult decision to leave and enter a shelter, she was referred for a housing assessment. Although she was working and had custody of 1 of her children at the start of the program, her mental health began to decline, and she lost her job as well as custody of her youngest son. This caused her mental health to deteriorate even further and she was on the verge of being evicted. Her Trauma Support Partner (TSP) provided crisis intervention services and accompanied her to a mental health evaluation. Flexible funding proved to be life saving and allowed her to pay for medications to help stabilize her mental health. Additionally, she was referred to the Emergency Housing Voucher Program and secured long-term supportive housing and is working on re-unification with her children.

"Angelica" entered the program with two children, and a desire to obtain her U.S. Residency. With the help of strong advocacy, she was able to do so utilizing protections under VAWA legislation. She obtained employment, and diligently worked to increase income. She attended a financial literacy program and won second place in a "Shark Tank" contest. She started self-employment by opening a construction business. She received an Emergency Housing Voucher with her two children and now reports feeling safe, more confident, and proud. She looks forward to building a future where her children know they can be safe and well!

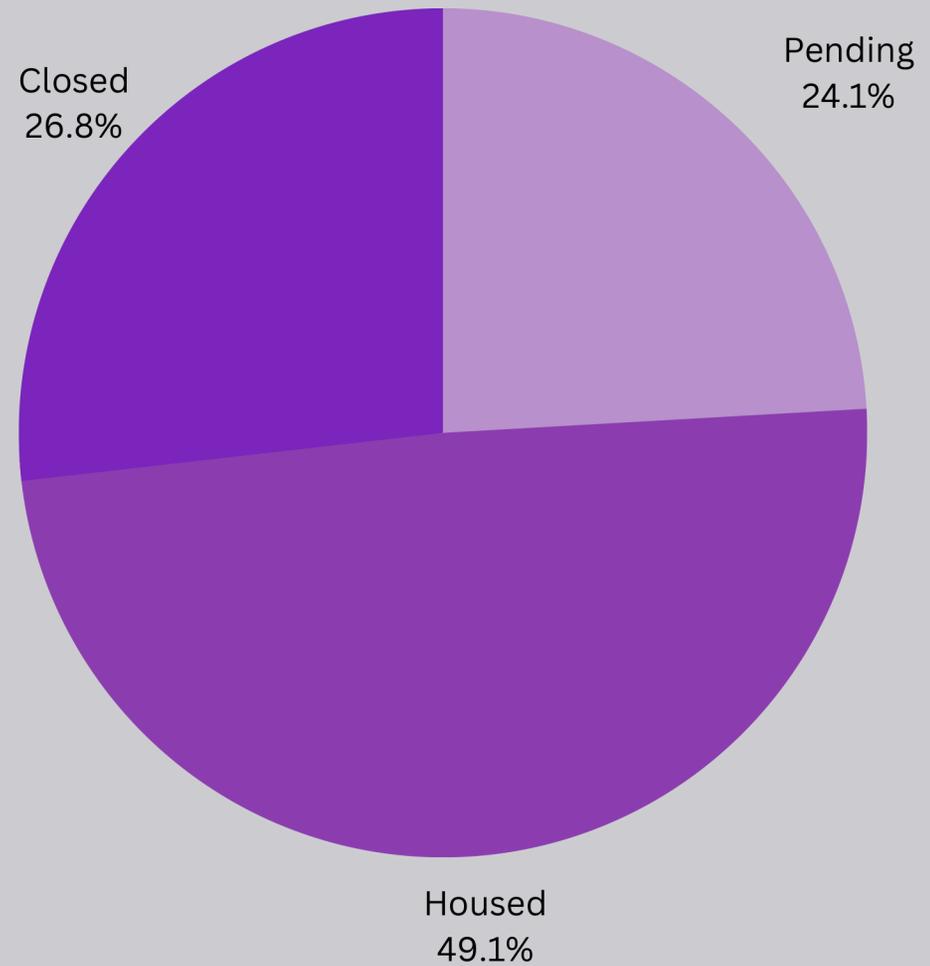

"Jennifer" experienced physical and sexual abuse from her boyfriend of two years. This created much anxiety and trauma for her and she felt very untrusting of others. She started the program wanting to work on feeling safe. She was eager to work with her case manager towards safety, and she faced many barriers to finding stable housing. She worked very hard and never gave up while keeping a positive attitude. She was able to find a safe place and after moving in, she began counseling and actively participated in program activities. She would often say to her case worker, this was the opportunity of a lifetime.

Housed - Individual households housed with EHV funds.

Closed - Closed applications include applicants whose applications expired, were closed by the housing authority, and individuals who ported their voucher to another jurisdiction.

Pending - Individuals who are actively searching for housing. This number includes individuals who may have an RFTA pending and are waiting on inspection.

Change Agent

HCDVCC is excited that a program that started here in Harris County by our very own Susan Hickey is now going nationwide! Susan started incorporating Ring cameras in her Safety Plans with victims when it was appropriate. She recognized what a valuable tool the Ring camera could be, but she also realized how quickly that expense could add up for an agency and especially for a victim. So, she decided to send an email to Ring asking for a donation of a couple of cameras. Everyone, but Susan was surprised when Ring said sure and gave HCDVCC a very generous donation of not only Ring Video Doorbells and Security Cameras but included a free Ring Protect Subscription plan for the life of each donated device! To date, under Susan's guidance, HCDVCC along with 12 partner agencies, have been able to give out over 800 RING devices - helping over 2500 individuals in 8 different counties!

After the success of our Program, Ring in partnership with the National Network to End Domestic (NNEDV) is now offering a Ring product donation program that will benefit nonprofit and tribal organizations across the Country whose primary mission is to support survivors of domestic violence.

Client Support Groups

Once a month our Trauma Support Partners host activities for their clients. Some of the activities include cake decorating, creating sugar scrubs, and jewelry.

"It was beautiful to see the smiling faces, working together as a family to create their unique items and providing encouragement to each other." - Trauma Support Partner
